William Bech

I believe JMeter to be a handy and easy to use tool to test servers. My server returned 0% failures as was expected and had a rather consistent response time.

I think it would be more useful when creating larger servers. Other than that once the css files were created it was easy to test and create additional tests. Once the initial hurdle of setting everything up is overcome.